

University of San Diego

Position: International Economics

The University of San Diego invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor in International Economics to begin in Fall 2018 with funding provided by the Center for Ethics, Economics, and Public Policy. Candidates should have a strong background and interest in interdisciplinary work in Philosophy, Politics, and Economics (PPE), and will be expected to teach regularly to assist in developing the PPE minor, in addition to standard courses in the Department of Economics. The successful candidate will have a Ph.D. in Economics prior to the start of the appointment and is expected to maintain a record of exceptional scholarly achievement and dedication to teaching excellence and service in a liberal arts environment. Teaching responsibilities include introductory and upper-level courses at either the undergraduate or graduate levels in the general area of microeconomics, along with field courses that reflect the candidate's research and teaching interests.

A private, Catholic institution, the University of San Diego is an Equal Opportunity employer, and is especially interested in candidates who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the academic community.

Applicants should submit the following: (1) a cover letter, (2) curriculum vita, (3) statements on teaching and research, (4) teaching evaluations, (5) job market paper, and (6) three letters of reference. Full consideration for an interview at the AEA meetings in Philadelphia will be given to applications completed by November 22, 2017. Applications may be submitted online through the provided AEA JOE external link or the University of San Diego HR website with reference number IRC25538.

Email questions to economics@sandiego.edu.